

Before Everything is Too Late

Once there were endless green fields

Happily dancing in the sun.

Endless were the daffodils swaying in the air;

Birds singing beautifully and children running joyfully,

Embracing the beauty of Mother Nature.

Yet, there came a time when humans no longer treasured Nature's beauty.

They just dumped all their garbage onto those green fields,

Hopelessly poisoning all the daffodils.

Nature was heaving bitterly.

Wind howling roughly,

Mirroring the pain and anger of nature.

Gone were the smiling daffodils and paddies;

Gone was the blue sunny sky with a fresh breeze.

In return, the whole place just smelled of sewage!

No more crystal clear water drops on the paddies and daffodils;

No more fragrant smell spreading around the green fields;

No more children laughing and running, embracing the beauty of Nature!

All becomes gloomy and sad!

Save the Earth!

Rebuild nature's beauty and bring the joy back!

Can we ...?
